

No-Contact Maintenance

Crossfire Technology is uniquely configured so that operators are never exposed to untreated water during lamp replacement.

The system design makes most maintenance activities quick and easy within a very small footprint. The UV lamps are air-mounted in the reactor chamber rather than in the wetted quartz sleeve to eliminate the risk of breaking the quartz during lamp replacement.

Operator safety is further enhanced by electrical, mechanical and thermal safeguards that control contact with potentially harmful elements during maintenance and repairs.

